

Architectural Seating Made Effortless

Do we first create the millwork structure and then custom make the upholstery to fit it? Or, given that seating must meet ergonomic standards for comfort, do we start with standard upholstery cushion panels and then design the structure to accommodate them? Since millwork is typically customized to fit site conditions, we might all be approaching this process in reverse.

Achieve the same result without the cost of making both elements entirely custom, which often leads to delays as they wait on each other during the final stages of the project.

What is UrbanPanel?

UrbanPanel is an upholstered cushion panel bench seating system suitable for designers, specifiers, and DIYers that offers enhanced design flexibility without the need for custom dimensions or the associated costs. Ideal for any commercial environment!

Why choose UrbanPanel?

- Doing upholstery first and working the millwork around it streamlines projects, saving time and money.
- This approach allows for greater design flexibility, letting the fabric and style dictate the final look.
- By prioritizing upholstery, we ensure a cohesive, tailored fit that transforms spaces with minimal effort, eliminating the need for custom-dimension panels.
